Hello dear WRN readers,

I am beyond excited to be writing my first of many Editor's Letters as part of the expanded leadership team here at Women Riders Now! I couldn't be more honored to work with Genevieve, Sarah, and the team; and I hope to hear from many of you down the road.

This is one of my favorite seasons as we share time with friends and family, and reflect on all the things we are thankful for (like motorcycles!). I'm grateful to have found the motorcycle community and to be able to share it with each of you through Women Riders Now. While many of us are preparing ourselves for the holiday season, we thought you (and your bike) would appreciate our article on preparing your motorcycle for winter. See our 8 easy steps to ensuring it’s happily ready for you come spring.

As temperatures grow colder, I’m reminded of something my husband, Andy, used to say: “There’s no bad weather, just wrong gear.” And believe me, I have closets full of gear to ensure I am prepared for it all. Check out our latest cold weather gear review from a company so aptly named California Heat.

My last long ride was about a month ago when we introduced you to the Women Riders World Relay and the group's year-long journey carrying the baton throughout the United States. It is awe inspiring to me to know that the same baton so many of us touched has now traveled to Central America and beyond.

On a very personal note, our Reader Story this month is extra special to me. For those of us who’ve lost loved ones, we know they are still always traveling with us, especially when we ride our motorcycles. I hope you are moved by Sherry Kimbrell’s story as she shares her inspirational and very personal message of one family’s multi-generational love of motorcycling. Hug your loved ones and enjoy the season!

Xoxox—see you down the road!
