Happy New Year! This newsletter is our way of sharing articles and news recently posted on WomenRidersNow.com (WRN).

I just returned from my first group motorcycle ride of the year. It is cold and rainy, the streets are dirty from recent storms, but nonetheless it ended up being a great kick-off to the 2023 riding season. It is always fun to reconnect with your riding friends as well as meet new ones, and it feels great to dust the winter doldrums off and remember the feeling of power hitting the rear wheel. I'm looking forward to some great moto adventures this year!

We'd love to hear about your epic ride plans for 2023. Check out our ever-growing listing of women's motorcycle events and start planning today.

Want to create your own epic ride? Check out Karan Andrea's article for tips on how to plan a large-scale motorcycle tour. Feel free to post about your plans on our Facebook page or send us your story and pictures to share with the WRN community.

I love meeting WRN fans when I'm on the road or at events and appreciate your support of us and of women in motorcycling. Here's to a fun-filled 2023.

See you out there,

Want to Organize an Epic Motorcycle Ride?

Tips on how to plan and execute a successful event

Karan Andrea had a crazy dream to ride the entire length of Route 66 on her vintage motorcycle. When her friends found out what she had planned, they wanted “in.” Before long, she had enlisted help and began organizing one of the most epic women’s motorcycle rides in history. With Harley-Davidson sponsorship and help from a number of other supporters, Karan made her dream a reality which WRN featured here last month. This month, she shares some of her tips on how to pull off a successful large-scale ride. LEARN MORE

Jessica Rainville discovered that you're not too short or too old to learn new tricks. She learned to ride a small dirt bike at age 30 and hasn't stopped popping wheelies, jumping over logs, and riding since. She's such a two-wheeled addict that even winter's ice, snow, and cold can't hold her back!
